[Date Waiver Generated]

Dear [First Name Last Name]:

Pursuant to the Presidential Open Access Policy issued by the University of California on October 23, 2015, this communication serves to notify you that your request for a waiver of the open access license for "[article title]" to be published in [journal title] has been granted, upon the condition that [First Name Last Name] is a copyright owner of the article. As described in the Presidential Open Access Policy, you are still required to provide a copy of your article for deposit; this copy will be maintained in a closed archive not accessible to the public.

Please be aware that waiver of the application of the UC open access license to your article as specified above does not affect public access requirements from funders such as government agencies. If the article is subject to Department of Energy public access requirements for Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory publications, the 2008 NIH Public Access Policy, a policy developed as a result of the 2013 White House Office of Science and Technology Policy memorandum, or other funder requirements, those obligations cannot be waived. You must be sure to reserve rights sufficient to comply with any funder policies when you enter into a publication agreement for the article.

Although you have received a waiver of the University's OA license, the publisher's agreement may provide sufficient rights to allow copies of your article to be made publicly available in eScholarship, the UC open access repository. In some cases, the UC libraries have negotiated this right with publishers separate from the agreement between the author and the publisher. The publisher may ask that certain conditions be met, some of which the repository can easily accommodate (for example, an embargo period during which the article will not be made publicly available). The bibliographic information will be made available for harvesting and indexing by search engines, such as Google Scholar, creating increased awareness of your article.

If you have any questions about the UC Open Access policy, the waiver of the open access license, or depositing your article in the UC repository, please contact oapolicy-help@universityofcalifornia.edu.

Sincerely,
